Big Executive

Lesson for May 3, 1959

DAVID, as King of Israel, would not make nearly so large a splash in the modern world as he did in his time. For one thing his kingdom was a large one for him, but in our times it would seem to be pretty small. At the greatest extent it measured only about 150 miles from north to south, and an average of about 120 east to west. Lay that down in Virginia for the map of your own state and it will not look extraordinary. Furthermore, kings are very unpopular nowadays. We tolerate the few that are left not more as curiosities than as vital necessities.

Nevertheless this ancient freebooter who lived in a tumble who looked a kingdom out of the wreckage of other kingdoms was a man of such strength of character particularly that he has remained a figure of romance and religion combined. Centuries from would not do as much good to think of him as king for nobody around here has any chance to become a king. Still, most Americans do cherish the kind of career day becoming an executive the bigger the better, and we can do ourselves some good by thinking of David as a good example of a big executive.

Dr. Foreman

For the People

The executive will always be with us. Whether you are operating a factory or an orchestra or a college or a steel plant there has to be a boss of some kind. People may not like particular bosses, but a man who thinks we'd better abolish all bosses doesn't know what he's talking about. The ancient king like the modern business executive is the policy-maker he makes decisions that affect his whole business. If he is any good, he is worth his extra salary. But what makes a boss a good one? Of course he should know the business well, from the inside and David surely did. He knew the land and the people he was an experienced guerilla fighter, he had been trained in the leadership of smaller units before he took high command. He knew what the people needed, having come up from the ranks he knew what they thought and what they wanted and how they felt. It is said of him that he "administered justice and equity to all his people." Some kings have used their power for themselves; David used his for his people.

Public Relations

David was no Hitler perpetually unarmed so long as another country was left unconquered. He dreamed no dreams of world-empire. His territory for those days was ample and larger than most. We read of his friendly relations with other kingdoms on various borders. Now that is another mark of the good executive he not only uses his position for the public good, but he maintains good "public relations" in every direction. Nowadays every business of any size, including educational institutions, will have a public-relations director. This is not mere advertising. Whatever good your outfit may be able to do, it can do its job better if its aims are understood.

Under God

David was first and last a religious man. He learned some hard lessons the hard way, one of these was that not even a king can be above the law of God. His kingdom, strictly speaking, was not his own; it was God's kingdom which he was expected to manage as God's representative. The people he ruled were God's people before they were his. Like all kings, he came and went; only God remains forever God is King of Kings Lord of Lords. When J. B. Phillips came to translate Ephesians 6:9 he had a happy thought. Turning what Paul writes into the terms of the 20th century he remembers that "master" and "slave" are no longer realistic words. So he has Paul warn employers: Remember that you are responsible to a Heavenly Employer! High office, whether it is in a business firm, a manufacturing plant, a university, or in a political position, is not only a public trust, but it is a responsibility under God.

About The Home

By Frances Dell

Main dishes that are quick, easy and inexpensive, are a book to the woman who must rush home from the office for a hot bridge game and prepare dinner.

Steaks and chops are the obvious answer, but even the finest of meats can become monotonous. So, the cook may be a little too high for some of us with several growing children.

Life can be made much easier for the homemaker if in her bag of tricks there are several quick-to-prepare dishes that give variety to weekly menus. Take advantage of quick-cooking rice or instant mashed potatoes to accompany your main dish. Add a package of frozen green vegetables, and you have a dinner you can be proud of.

In your weekly trip to the grocery store, don't neglect the frozen food sections. In this department can be found, already prepared, individual pot pies in a variety of meats — chicken, turkey, and meat combinations. These just need to be popped in the oven for a very few minutes and you have a main dish around which you can build a delicious variety. And, if you are really rushed, or just want to be lazy, there are, of course, the "TV snack" suppers. These include a selection of hamburger steaks, chicken, turkey with dressing, etc., all nicely bolstered with a variety of vegetables and they just need warming.

Too, in this department can be found many attractively packaged, frozen desserts that require little or no cooking, so pies and cakes can make an almost magical appearance on your table as a delightful end to an appetizing meal.

KNOW THE WEATHER

By E. H. Sims

Why does a weather change so often affect the sinuses or the ears?

When the weather changes, the pressure also changes, as a rule, this is true. When a clear spell comes to an end and rainy, low-pressure weather begins, those who experience ear or sinus trouble often experience discomfort.

This is because there are pockets of air in our head, or sinuses, which become blocked off. The pressure inside becomes greater than outside when the barometer falls (and a low-pressure system arrives overhead) and expands the pockets.

A doctor will open them up, or equalize the pressure. The eustachian tube in the ear is a natural safety valve to allow air in and out of the ear. If it is closed by a swelling or a bad cold, then you risk puncturing your ear drum if you fly at a high altitude.

Letter to Editor

Appomattox, Va. April 23, 1959

The Mayor
The Council.

After reading the nice letter written by our Mayor of appreciation to the people of Appomattox, in the city's Times-Virginian April 16, 1959 I desire to express our sincere appreciation to both Mayor and Council in using customers who had invoked letting them.

We also wish to thank the Patrol Citizens who have stood by the Town so faithfully the past year. Your business has been appreciated, your kindness will always be remembered.

For to help the Merchants of Appomattox is to help Appomattox.

We are realize things could have been much worse. God could have sent an increase of snow or ice. Thankful for the nice street cut.

We can also get a ray of sunshine from the meters if we use them the right way.

Fines, what does our Town need most? Park with a meter. Room for the boys and girls. For the travelers who pass through to stop over in. Why not use the meter system to improve the town. Think of the hours of fun our boys and girls could have in the evening too, or one while their mothers shopped. Yes, the children would bring the mothers to town.

Our town needs lots of things never money could buy.

Second, who owns the rest rooms? One for white and one for colored.

I'm not trying to hold the meters in town. I'm only saying what the meters could do to make they keep the meters. Things they would be able to do that they are not able to do now and belong to our country or out-of-town people.

The out-of-town people will have to help get those things because the businesses aren't large enough to do them.

My days in Appomattox have been happy days. There is always a Day of Sunshine in Appomattox, maybe not how Hard the task. In my experience, I have found the harder the task the brighter the ray.

Any where you may roam, you will not find any better people that here in Appomattox. You are always ready to give and do your part.

Sometimes I think you are impossibled on too much but you always come out happy, whatever the task has been.

The people who have not been faithful to Appomattox are in the minority as they are everywhere else.

The next song I think we should sing is one that will help Appomattox one more than anything else.

This is the song:

Thankful that your merchants are honest men working and trying to make an honest living.

Yes, thank God for Appomattox. For the people, for the streets and the meters, and above all except God, I thank you too for everything.

And again, I thank you over and over for sticking to Appomattox for the past year.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. R. B. Hailey, Sr.

P. S. —Someone else please send a word of thanks to the people who have stuck to Appomattox!

The program will consist of two sections — the morning session will be on instruction, record books, project information, film, safety and safety tests. The afternoon session will be the Tractor Driving Contest and elimination for state competition. Cash prizes will be awarded the winners and a chance to compete at the Virginia State College for the state championship.

The Appomattox 4-H members eligible to attend the 4-H Short Course and Wildlife Camp are as follows: girls—Ora Scruggs, Lolita Ferguson, Juanita Lipford, Barbara Forbes, Mildred Johnson; boys—Ernest Humbles, Hershel Forbes, Franklin Walker, Gilbert James Jr., Bobby Hix, Clinton Turner, Robert Hunter. These 4-H members carried and completed satisfactory projects for the 1959 club work year.

The 4-H members carrying Market Hog projects — whose animals reach the desired goal of 200 pounds by August 14th, (six-month period) will participate and sell their animals at the 4-H and NFA Hog Show and Sale Event to be held in Lynchburg on August 14. They are as follows: Dorothy Concor, David Trent, Robert Davis, Willis McCoy, Joe Culpeper, Buck James, Ernest Humbles, Louis Humbles.

The annual countywide 4-H picnic will be held at Prince Edward Lake on June 6

WARRENTON OBSERVES BICENTENNIAL EVENT

A priceless collection of historic relics, one of the most extensive of its kind ever gathered for a single exhibit will be on display in Warrenton, Virginia on April 30 and May 1, as part of the gigantic Fauquier County Bicentennial Celebration.

Such moving historical momentos as a love letter written by Lt. Robert E. Lee to Mary Custis, his future wife when she was visiting in Warrenton together with drawings done by Lee in the field and sent home to amuse his children. Other letters on exhibit will be those written by Gen. Pierre G. T. Bouregard, J .E. B. Stuart, and Jubal Early.

Robert E. Lee will also be represented by his engraved golden spurs; two of his swords, an old Army sword and his dress blade. Also his portable field desk, his spy glass, boots, hat, watch and ring, and the memorandum book in which Lee recorded the capture of John Brown at Harper's Ferry. The commission making Robert E. Lee, Jr., a Confederate cadet may also be seen.

The early history of this Republic will be amply represented by Washington relics, such as his silver camp mugs; the sword he carried during the Braddock Campaign; his coat buttons, compass and spurs. An exhibit of much of the Washington silverware from Mount Vernon is also planned. Rare book lovers will be interested in the rare and valuable "Acts of Assembly," a law book published at Williamsburg in 1733.

The Custic family Bible with entries recording the first marriage of Martha Washington and the birth of her children will be exhibitied together with Mrs. Washington's initialed handkerchief, her shawl and a single earring. Other priceless relics will include delicate miniatures of her children painted by Charles Wilson Peale and worn by Mrs. Washington on a bracelet.

The award awarded by the Virginia General Assebly to Presley Neville O'Bannon, the Fauquier-born Marine, hero of the shores of Tripoli, will be shown under guard of Marines in uniform of Lieutenant O'Bannon's era.

General Turner Ashby, the Fauquier Cavalry leader, will be represented with his belt, bridle, knife and fork, and a banner made by the ladies of Salem (now Marshall) for the company, raised there by the General.

From an earlier era comes relics of Robert Ashby, the general's ancestor. Ashby helped George Washington survey in Fauquier, and his surveying instruments will be on display.

Chief Justaice John Marshall's possessions to be shown include a cast iron fireback made and used at his birthplace near Midland, Marshall's carpetbag will be displayed along with his shoe buckles, portable desk, pen, flat silver and a collection of his papers.

Colonel John S. Mosby's holster will be on exhibit. Also the cane presented to him by an Union drummer boy whose life he saved: the sash Mosby wore when he was wounded, letters to Mosby from Robert E. Lee, a cup presented to Mosby by the British government, and other Mosby momentos.

The priceless collection assembled for the Bicentennial display will be returned to the owners after the two-day exhibit and probably will not be brought together again.
